

SWALLOW PILLORED

The Masquerading Parson Depicted In True Light

A BRAZEN PRETENDER

Guilty of Lying; Convicted by Church and State—And More to Follow.

From yesterday's Philadelphia Press we reproduce the following self-explanatory editorial:

The occasion has come when in the interest of public truth and common morals it is necessary to gibbet Rev. Dr. S. C. Swallow. His own ingrained and incorrigible mendacity brings this punishment and obloquy upon him. The Press might have permitted his offense as a convicted liar some years ago to pass with the current coin of the campaign, but when he voluntarily lies to the Press and deliberately attempts to deceive and mislead this paper, we owe to ourselves and to our readers the duty of scourging him in the public pillory.

In a recent speech, Jeremiah S. Black, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, declared that Dr. Swallow had been found guilty of lying and had been defrocked by his Church. In common with other newspapers, The Press printed a report of the speech including this statement. Thereupon Dr. Swallow addressed a letter to this paper claiming that the statement was false and asking for a correction. It happened that the letter fell into the hands of those who did not know the facts, and, accepting Dr. Swallow's denial as trustworthy, the "correction" was made as requested.

By this deception, The Press was placed in a false position, and we now proceed to place this lying hypocrite in his true position. His denial was a conscious misrepresentation, based on the catch that the verdict of guilty of lying, and the sentence of "defrocking" were pronounced, not by the Conference, but by a committee with judicial powers acting on behalf of the Conference. In essence and substance the statement of Mr. Black was true. Dr. Swallow was convicted of lying; he was "defrocked," he was held up by the Church authorities to the reprobation of the Church; and he now aggravates his original wrong of lying by the super-added offense of willful deception.

In order that there may be no escape on his part and no misunderstanding on the part of the public, we present in other columns the full documentary evidence which condemns Dr. Swallow beyond the possibility of wriggling away. It will be seen that as far back as 1869 he was convicted by a Church tribunal of lying. Again in 1901 he was arraigned before the Church organization on the charge of lying with eleven different specifications. The committee of trial appointed by Presiding Elder Vocum rendered a verdict that eight of the specifications were sustained by the evidence. "We also decide," adds the committee, "that the charge (of lying) is sustained and hereby suspend the accused, the Rev. Dr. S. C. Swallow, from all ministerial services and Church privileges until the ensuing annual conference." And yet this brazen pretender has the effrontery to deny that he was convicted of lying and that he was "defrocked"—that is, stripped of his priestly functions for a time!

Still again, in 1902, Dr. Swallow was brought to the bar of the Central Pennsylvania Conference on charges of lying and insubordination. An ecclesiastical court was created for his trial. After full examination of the court, or committee, reported to the Conference that the specifications were sustained by the evidence, and that "the sustained specifications do prove him to be guilty of highly imprudent and unministerial conduct, for which we adjudge that he be called before the bar of the Conference and that a public reproof be administered by the Presiding Elder." And still this unabashed liar with this sentence hanging over him has the hardihood to deny his condemnation for lying by lying again where he thinks it may pass unchallenged. Yet again, he was convicted of libel in the court of Dauphin county, and sentenced to pay a fine of $500 together with the costs of prosecution, and to remain in custody till the sentence was complied with. On a technicality he was granted a new trial, but he has never availed himself of this opportunity, and the stigma of having been pronounced guilty by a jury of his countrymen rests upon him.

Such are the records of the ecclesiastical and civil courts. They put an ineffaceable brand on Dr. Swallow. But disgraceful as they are, they are far from the worst of the damning indictment against him. We give today but one volume of the book of his shame. A blacker and more abhorrent volume remains yet to be given. Dr. Swallow has deliberately tried to deceive and mislead The Press and that game, he will find, cannot be tried with impunity. He has undertaken, for reasons which can well be understood, to vilify and traduce public men the latchet of whose shoes he is unworthy to unloose, and his base conduct not merely justifies but in the public interest demands that he shall be stripped of the cloak of decency and sanctity under which he masquerades. He has not only been pronounced guilty of being a liar and libeller, but he is an impious and blasphemous hypocrite, and in the interest of the church and state alike, he should be laid bare as the hideous and loathsome thing he is, so that men will avoid him as they would a leper.

The records at Harrisburg do not show that John M. Reynolds kept his promise by authorizing his attorney to withdraw his name as an applicant for a place on the Lincoln Party ticket. This declaration he made on a legal paper served on Mr. Thropp. It can hardly be considered either a "political promise" or a "personal pledge" but it seems to have met the same fate.

AUTUMN WEDDING

Marriage of James S. Davidson to Miss Ethel Corle.

At noon on Wednesday, October 17, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Corle on East-Pitt street, when their daughter, Miss Ethel, became the bride of Mr. James S. Davidson. The impressive ring ceremony was used and was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. A. T. G. Apple of the Reformed church. The parlor was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and pink and white flowers.

The wedding-march, a selection from Lohengrin, and "Hearts and Flowers" during the ceremony, were skillfully rendered by Miss Bessie Corle. The wedding was a quiet one, only the families and immediate friends of the bride and groom being present.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a handsome gown of white Persian lawn, trimmed with German Val lace and carried a bouquet of bride roses, while the bridesmaid, Miss Pearl Lange, wore white organdie over pink and carried pink and white carnations; the bride traveling gown was of maroon broadcloth. Ellis Davidson, brother of the groom, was best man. A reception was held from one to three o'clock, after which the happy couple left for a trip to Pittsburgh and Akron, O. A shower of rice and "good wishes" followed them as they entered the car. They will be at home to their friends after November 7.

The bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Corle and is an accomplished musician. The groom is the second son of Squire and Mrs. H. C. Davidson and is the junior member of the firm of Davidson Brothers. Both have many friends who join with The Gazette in extending to them hearty congratulations and best wishes for their future happiness and success.

McElowney-Hinkley

Miss Hallie Mabel Hinkley, head girl in the Bell Telephone Exchange, Davis, W. Va., and Ralph Harry McElowney, a young man of Davis, were married in the National Bank building, Davis, by Rev. George Bleakly, pastor of the M. E. church. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Hinkley, while the groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McElowney—Cumberland News.

Mr. McElowney is the son of Mrs. E. B. McElowney, who resides on East Pitt street, and has many friends here.

An organ of "the annex" had somewhat to say of Mr. Oster last week. Mr. Voter, will you kindly weigh in your mental balances Hon. E. S. Doty and Mr. George W. Oster, as to intellectual ability, educational attainments, business qualifications, etc., etc.? Such an examination will enable you to come to a conclusion for yourself as to which of the two possesses the qualifications that merit a place in the Legislature of the state.

Popular Everett Girl Married

Thursday morning, October 11, at St. Thomas Catholic church of this place, Rev. Father Cashman united in marriage Edward P. Doorley of Scottsdale and Miss Jerian Harris of Everett. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. H. Harris and is one of Everett's accomplished and popular young ladies. The groom, who was formerly bookkeeper at the Everett furnace, is employed in the same capacity at Scottsdale, where they will make their home.

Married in Somerset

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Trevonnie, at Holsapple, on Wednesday, October 10, Willis F. Ream of Senor and Miss Sarah A. Mock of Ryot, this county, were united in marriage by Rev. H. A. Buffington.

Carver-Manges

On Wednesday, October 17, at Trinity Lutheran parsonage, Bedford, George A. Carver of Stoyestown, Somerset county, and Miss Ida B. Manges of New Buena Vista were united in marriage by Rev. M. L. Culler.

Political perfidy—broken "political promises and personal pledges" lost "his home ward, his home town, his home county" for Reynolds in 1904, and the law of cause and effect is unchanged.

POST AND GAZETTE

The Post is unquestionably the best morning daily paper in Pittsburgh, and you can get it with the Bedford Weekly Gazette, both papers, only $3.50 for one year. Send your order to this office.

Even Oster condemned gang legislation in his speech at the Reynolds convention, though the resolutions pledge him to Penrose.

THE DEADLY PARALLEL

Showing the Relative Strength of Thropp and Reynolds in Their Home Districts.

Returns from the homes of John M. Reynolds and Joseph E. Thropp in the 1904 election show the following:

	Reynolds'	Roosevelt	Reynolds	Thropp
East Ward, Bedford,	148	148	127	161
West Ward, Bedford,	146	146	113	112
Bedford Township	278	278	201	331
West Providence Twp.	346	346	168	232
Everett Borough	364	364	179	254

Mr. Reynolds told the people before the election that he would sweep his own home districts and Mr. Thropp's home districts as well. The figures above show how well he did it.

NAILED AS LIES

False Statements By Machine Organ Shattered By

MR. THROPP'S OPEN LETTER

Political Gangsters Have Caused Trouble With Labor—A True Statement of Conditions.

Earlston, Pa., October 15, 1906. Bedford Gazette,

Bedford, Pa.,

My attention has just been called to one of the many false statements being published in the Reynolds' organs. On the first page last column, of the Altoona Gazette of the 11th inst. is a statement lauding Reynolds, my opponent, and closing by speaking of my having always assumed a hostile attitude toward the miners. There is not one word of truth in this. I was the first operator in this vicinity to phone President Gilday, in March last, that I would pay the 1903 scale. The men were put to work on the 1903 scale in April. Some political influence was put to work to have them called out. I then issued instructions, simply to remain quiet and wait for the men to return. This course was pursued and finally General Secretary William B. Wilson of the United Mine Workers of America 'phoned to me that either he or Mr. Gilday would come in-person and arrange for the proper signing of the scale and for the men going back to work. Mr. Gilday, Mr. McEwen and sub-district president, McMillan, came. There was no friction, no unpleasantness. Mr. Gilday said "he was ready to sign the scale," which was promptly done by me and the men started to work.

This was two days before Hon. James Kerr and others, after the Harrisburg meeting, made a settlement and had no connection whatever with my understanding with Mr. Gilday and Secretary Wilson. No outside party in any way influenced my action.

Although my furnace is out of blast now, being repaired, I am piling up thousands of tons of coke to keep the men employed and the furnace will be in blast within ten days. While on this subject it might be well to add further that there has never been any trouble at my works of any magnitude, which has not been fermented for political purposes by the agents or at least the friends of those who are now working for John M. Reynolds.

National Organizer McKay of Pittsburgh, publicly, in a hall full of miners, commended me as being "one of the fairest employers that he had ever met," in being willing to go before the men in that hall, crowded with miners, and publicly ask them to question me on any subject. There were men there from nearly every mine in the region. When a vote was taken, I understand, my men alone were asked to vote and all but two voted that the proposition I made was right and they accepted it. Some of the committee stated that Kearney, to use their own terms, "was the whitest mine in the Broad Top region."

I have no wish to interfere the minds of our best men who toil by bringing up the labor question, but now that the Reynolds' organs invite it by false statements, it is better that the public should know the facts.

When I first came into Bedford county, the present Colonial furnace was known as the Kemble Iron Company. Reynolds was general solicitor of the mine and William Lauder, his political lieutenant, was general manager. Reynolds is now vice president, with a minor interest in the company; Lauder is still general manager. I had been in this county but a little while before I received a letter from Lauder expressing the hope that I would not become "a distracting element in the labor field." He sent me a list of their wages. Any intelligent man can see what this meant,—they did not want me, by any means, to pay higher wages than they were paying. Later I got a letter from him stating that "I would not be able to run this furnace with the 'ridgerlones' of Bedford county," meaning the American citizens.

Only last spring when I was anticipating advancing the wages of both my furnace-men and miners, as I subsequently did, Lauder wrote to one of my superintendents that "they proposed reducing the rate of wages of their coke drawers and thought we ought to know what they were doing." Another instance which intelligent men can see was simply an invitation for me to reduce. I have now in my possession a recent letter written to my son, asking for a list of our wages and saying, "The labor question is becoming very troublesome and I would not be surprised to see some demands." In another letter asking for my list of wages, a higher officer of the small Colonial Furnace (of which Reynolds is vice president) wrote: "I feel sure, in your opinion, we should aim to work somewhat harmoniously along this line in order to avoid trouble." An intelligent workman can see through these requests,—Reynolds, Lauder and their associates wished me to combine with them against the men, and I refused. I have repeatedly been invited and have repeatedly refused to join any organization against the men.

Now allusion is made in the Altoona Gazette article to the eviction of tenants. The form of leases that I have with my men was drawn in part by John M. Reynolds, but I had a clause put in that the superintendent must first notify the men before they could be put out of their houses, even after the time specified in the lease for their leaving had expired. Reynolds was also solicitor for the Saxton Furnace Company, which I have recently purchased. I find in their leases a clause providing that after a man has ceased working for them for a period of ten days, he, his family and furniture can be put out in the road without any notice whatever. This is specially mentioned. I am told that the leases at the Colonial furnace are the same as Reynolds and Lauder had them at the Saxton furnace. Just in this connection one other point. They have tried to convey the impression, among the miners, that Patrick Dolan, who was one of the leaders of the trouble at the Kearney mines, when he was one of the officers of the Knights of Labor in that region, was the Patrick Dolan, but recently president of the United Mine Workers of America of the Pittsburgh district. This is not correct. They are entirely different men. The sub-district officers of the United Mine Workers of America, have only to confer with their district president, Mr. Gilday, also National Organizer McKay to learn of that. My political opponents have been to blame for nearly all of the trouble caused there.

Patrick Dolan of Bedford county, about whom and in whose behalf so much has been printed, is now in my employ at Kearney and has been for two years.

It might as well be known now that I would have purchased the Saxton furnaces two years ago, and placed them in operation, had it not been for the work of Reynolds, Lauder and associates. The working men of this county have lost by this delay of two years the sum of $500,000, which would have been paid out in wages.

You will pardon the length of this communication, but it is well that the intelligent voters of our district should at least know some of the truth, while Reynolds' organs and his side partner, Bailey's organs, are keeping their columns filled with falsehoods.

After I purchased the Saxton furnaces, within two days fifteen men from the Reynolds-Lauder plant at Riddlesburg, made application for work. Very truly yours,

Joseph E. Thropp.

Last of the Season

The ball game at Anderson Park this afternoon will be the last of the season and it is for the championship of the county. The batteries on both sides are strong and gilled edged support is expected from both teams. Everybody out!

Enfield and Horn have faith left to remove mountains, hence have bared their breasts for Bailey, and through him for the "icicle man" in the background.

THE OLD TRICK

Reynolds' Methods Used By Bailey's Henchmen

MISREPRESENTATIONS

In Each County to Bolster Reynolds' Waving Cause in the Other Two.

Editor Bailey seems to be employing Reynolds' methods in Reynolds' interest. It is but two years since emissaries of the man "curled from purest snow" gave out bulletins to the effect that the man who resembles the "icicle on Diana's temple" would carry this county by from 12 to 15 hundred. Such was the drift of the telegram of Chairman Haderman and such was the statement of the present Republican chairman, Attorney Sell, while on his trip as an information bureau in Altoona and Johnstown two years ago. But the election came and REYNOLDS LOST THE COUNTY BY 770. W. W. Bailey claimed before the primary election to have been informed that there was great opposition in this county to Mr. Thropp, in Democratic ranks, hence he decided to let his name be used as a candidate, and he wrote an open letter to the Democrats of the county, embodying letters to Dr. Enfield and Mr. Horn, and circulated it broadcast, and the primary came along and he got THREE VOTES.

Now Dr. Enfield writes a letter stating that from this time forward the cry will be, "Vote for no one but a straight Democrat for Congress in this district." Alas, poor Enfield! How much more becoming it would be for some straight Democrat to make such an assertion! How strange that so many men can see the notes in the eyes of their brethren! Enfield and some other unknown writer—a writer perhaps whose name would drive away rather than attract votes, hence the omission—are making great claims; but when the election is over, it will be a case of history repeating itself; it will be a repetition of the 1904 election, and Bailey may get the three votes he got at the primaries, another repetition.

By simple mathematics a vote for Bailey is a vote for Reynolds, but there will not be enough of them to defeat Mr. Thropp.

If Reynolds allows Miller's name to remain on the Republican ticket for State Senator it will be no trouble for you to decide between him and Hon. William H. Koons.

William Milburn

William Milburn, an aged and respected citizen of Bedford, died at his home on South Richard street, Monday afternoon at two o'clock. He was born in Bedford 86 years ago. In 1847 he was married to Miss Mary Devore, who departed this life in 1897. "Uncle Billy," as he was familiarly called, will be greatly missed in the community. He was a member of Co. H, 55th Penna. Vol., and served eighteen months in the Civil War. The following children survive him: Harry of McKeesport, Martin of Bedford, John of Friend's Cove, Mrs. William Joseph of Fishertown and Miss Sarah at home. Funeral services were held at St. Mark's Lutheran church in Friend's Cove yesterday morning, conducted by Rev. J. W. Wingle, and interment was made in the cemetery adjoining.

Mrs. John D. Horne

Mrs. Annie C. wife of the late Capt. John D. Horne, died at her home in Pittsburgh on Friday, October 12, after an illness of one week. Mrs. Horne was a member of Lieutenant J. M. Lysle Circle No. 6, Ladies of the G. A. R., and a member of the P. H. C. Friendship Circle No. 128. She is survived by the following children: Vinnie R., Lowrie W., Nellie, Claudia and Jessie M. Horne; and by one sister and two brothers: Mrs. Eliza B. Cook of Pittsburgh and Henry and Samuel Bagley, of this place. Mrs. Horne was a former resident of Bedford. The body was brought here on Sunday and laid to rest in the Bedford cemetery Monday afternoon.

Cora Agnes Hurley

Cora Agnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hurley, of Mann's Choice, died at the home of her parents last Thursday, October 11, of St. Vitus dance, aged 11 years, two months and five days. The funeral services were held in the M. E. church of that place, conducted by Rev. Guidin, and interment was made in the Christian cemetery at Sulphur Springs.

Death of a Child

Mabel, the six-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Whisel, of Everett, died at the home of its grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Whisel, of cholera infantum, on Tuesday.

Invitations Issued

Mrs. Elizabeth Bortz has issued invitation to the marriage of her daughter, Miss Bertha Elizabeth, to Mr. William A. Gaudrey, the marriage to take place at the home of the bride's mother, No. 31 North Mechanic street, on Wednesday evening, October 31, at 8 o'clock.—Cumberland News. Miss Bortz is well known in Bedford.

To cure an aching back,
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.

In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Charles Bierbach, stone contractor, living at 2625 Chestnut St., Erie, Pa., says: "For two years I had kidney trouble, and there was such a severe pain through my loins and limbs that I could not stoop or straighten up without great pain, had difficulty in getting about and was unable to rest at night, arising in the morning tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were irregular and deposited a heavy sediment. Doctors treated me for rheumatism, but failed to help me. I lost all confidence in medicine, but Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me so quickly and so thoroughly that I gladly made a statement to that effect for publication. This was in 1898, and during the six years which have elapsed I have never known Doan's Kidney Pills to fail."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Bierbach will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

the dying man to the carriage."

The lantern threw but a small ring of yellow light, so that when it had been carried over to De Catnat Amos Green was left lying in the shadow. Now they brought the light back to where the young man lay. But there was no sign of him. He was gone.

De Vivonne caught the false doctor by the throat and, hurling him down, would have choked him upon the spot had the others not dragged them apart. "You lying dog!" he cried. "Is this your skill? The man has fled, and we are ruined!"

"He has done it in his death struggle!" gasped the other hoarsely. "He cannot be far off."

"That is true. He cannot be far off," cried De Vivonne. "He has neither horse nor arms. You, Despard and Raymond de Carnac, guard the other, that he play us no trick. Do you, Latour, and you, Turberville, ride down the road and wait by the south gate. If he enter Paris at all he must come in that way. If you get him, tie him before you on your horse and bring him to the rendezvous. In any case, it matters little, for he is a stranger, this fellow, and only here by chance."

The two horsemen rode off in pursuit of the fugitive, and De Catnat, still struggling desperately to escape, was dragged down the St. Germain road and thrust into the carriage, which had waited at some distance while these incidents were being enacted. Three of the horsemen rode ahead, the coachman was curtly ordered to follow them, and De Vivonne, having dispatched one of the band with a note to his sister, followed after the coach with the remainder of his desperadoes.

The unfortunate guardsman had now entirely recovered his senses and found himself with a strap round his ankles and another round his wrists, a captive inside a moving prison which lumbered heavily along the country road. He had been stunned by the shock of his fall, and his leg was badly bruised by the weight of his horse. His mind, however, pained him more than his body. He sank his head into his pinioned hands and stamped madly with his feet, rocking himself to and fro in his despair. What a fool, a treble fool, he had been! He, an old soldier, who had seen something of war, to walk with open eyes into such a trap!

But then came a return of that common sense which lies so very closely beneath the impetuosity of the Celt. The matter was done now, and he must see if it could not be mended. Amos Green had escaped. That was one grand point in his favor. And Amos Green had heard the king's message and realized its importance. It was true that he knew nothing of Paris, but surely a man who could pick his way at night through the forests of Maine would not be balked in finding so well known a house as that of the archbishop of Paris.

And then the thought of escape occurred to his mind. Might he not even now be in time perhaps to carry his own message? Who were these men who had seized him? And where were they taking him to? Full of curiosity, he peered out of the windows.

A horseman was riding close up on either side, but there was glass in front of the carriage, and through this he could gain some idea as to his whereabouts. The clouds had cleared now, and the moon was shining brightly, bathing the whole wide landscape in its shimmering light. To the right lay the open country, broad plains with clumps of woodland and the towers of castles peering out from above the groves. On the left, but far away, lay the glimmer of Paris. They were leaving it rapidly behind. Whatever his destination, it was neither the capital nor Versailles. Then he began to count the chances of escape. His sword had been removed, and his pistols were still in the holsters beside his unfortunate horse. He was unarmed, then, even if he could free himself, and his captors were at least a dozen in number. There were three on ahead, riding abreast along the white moonlit road. Then there was one on each side, and he should judge by the clatter of hoofs that there could not be fewer than half a dozen behind. That would make exactly twelve, including the coachman—too many, surely, for an unarmed man to hope to baffle. At the thought of the coachman he had glanced through the glass front at the broad back of the man, and he had suddenly in the glimmer of the carriage lamp observed something which struck him with horror.

The man was evidently desperately wounded. It was strange indeed that he could still sit there and flick his whip with so terrible an injury. In the back of his great red coat, just under the left shoulder blade, was a gash in the cloth where some weapon had passed, and all round was a wide patch of dark scarlet which told its own tale. Nor was this all. As he raised his whip the moonlight shone upon his hand, and De Catnat saw, with a shudder, that it also was splashed and clogged with blood. The guardsman craned his neck to catch a glimpse of the man's face, but his broad brimmed hat was drawn low, and the high collar of his driving coat was raised, so that his features were in the shadow.

And now they had come to a spot where the main road ran onward, but a smaller side track wound away down the steep slope of a hill, and so in the direction of the Seine. The advance guard had kept to the main road and the two horsemen on either side were trotting in the same direction when, to De Catnat's amazement, the carriage suddenly swerved to one side and in an instant plunged down the steep incline, the two stout horses galloping at their topmost speed. The coachman standing up and looking curiously at them and the clumsy old vehicle bounding along in a way which threw him backward and forward from one seat to the other. Behind him he could hear a shout of consternation from the escort and then the rush of galloping hoofs. Fast as the coach went, its pursuers went faster still. The rattle of their hoofs was at the very back, and suddenly at one of the windows there came into view the red, distended nostrils of a horse. Slowly it drew forward, the muzzle, the eye, the ears, the mane, coming into sight as the rider still gained, and then above them the fierce face of Despard and the gleam of a brass pistol.

"At the horse, Despard; at the horse!" cried an authoritative voice from behind.

The pistol flashed, and the coach lurched over as one of the horses gave a convulsive spring. But the driver still shrieked and lashed with his whip, while the carriage bounded onward.

But now the road turned a sudden curve, and there, right in front of them, not a hundred paces away, was the Seine, running cold and still in the moonshine. The bank on either side of the highway ran straight down without any break to the water's edge. There was no sign of a bridge, and a black shadow in the center of the stream showed where the ferryboat was returning after conveying some belated travelers across. The driver never hesitated, but, gathering up the reins, he urged the frightened creatures into the river. They hesitated, however, when they first felt the cold water about their hoofs, and even as they did so one of them, with a low moan, fell over upon her side. Despard's bullet had found its mark. Like a flash the coachman hurled himself from the box and plunged into the stream, but the pursuing horsemen were all round him before this, and half a dozen hands had seized him ere he could reach deep water and had dragged him to the bank. His broad hat had been struck off in the struggle, and De Catnat saw his face in the moonshine. Great he went! It was Amos Green.

"At the horse, Despard; at the horse!"

CHAPTER XII.
THE desperadoes were as much astonished as was De Catnat when they found that they had recaptured in this extraordinary manner the messenger whom they had given up for lost.

"A thousand thunders!" cried one. "And this is the man whom that devil's brat Latour would make out to be dead!"

"And how came he here?"
"And where is Etienne Arnaud?"
"He has stabbed Etienne, and taken his coat and hat."

"What! While we were all within stone's cast?"

"Aye, there is no other way out of it."

"By my soul," cried old Despard, "I had never much love for old Etienne, but I have emptied a cup of wine with him before now, and I shall see that he has justice. Let us cast these reins round the fellow's neck and hang him upon this tree."

Several pairs of hands were already unbuckling the harness of the dead horse when De Vivonne pushed his way into the little group.

"It is as much as your lives are worth to touch him," said he.

"But he has slain Etienne Arnaud."
"That score may be settled afterward. What he is the king's messenger, is the other all safe?"

"Yes, he is here."
"The man and put him in beside him. Unbuckle the traces of the dead horse. So! Now, De Carnac, put your own into the harness. You can mount the box and drive, for we have not very far to go."

The changes were rapidly made. Amos Green was thrust in beside De Catnat, and the carriage was soon totting up the steep incline which it had come down so precipitately. The American had said not a word since his capture and had remained absolutely stolid, with his hands crossed over his chest while his fate was under discussion. Now that he was alone once more with his comrade, however, he frowned and muttered.

"Those infernal horses!" he grumbled. "Why, an American horse would have taken to the water like a duck. Once over the river, we should have had a clear lead to Paris."

"My dear friend," cried De Catnat, "aying his manacled hands upon those of his comrade, 'how nobly you have stood by me! But how came you there? Never in my life have I been so astonished as when I saw your face.'"

Amos Green chuckled to himself. "I thought that maybe it would be a surprise to you if you knew who was driving you," said he. "When I was thrown from my horse I lay quiet, partly because it seemed to me to be more healthy to lie than to stand with all those swords clinking in my ears. Then they all got round you, and I rolled into the ditch, crept along it, got on the crossroad in the shadow of the trees and was beside the carriage before ever they knew that I was gone. I saw in a flash that there was only one way by which I could be of use to you. The coachman was leaning round, with his head turned, to see what was going on behind him. I out with my knife, sprang up on the front wheel and stopped his tongue."

"And then?"
"I pulled him down into the ditch, and I got into his coat and his hat. I had hardly got the reins before they were all back and bundled you into the coach. I was not afraid of their seeing me, but I was scared lest I should not know which road to take, and so set them on the trail. But they made it easy to me by sending some of their riders in front, so I did well until I saw that by-track and made a run for it."

The guardsman again pressed his comrade's hands. "You have been as true to me as hit to blade," said he. "It was a bold thought and a bold deed."
"And what now?" asked the American.

THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-A-Week World, now that a great Presidential campaign is foreshadowed, hopes to be a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only newspaper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening through out the world.

The Thrice-A-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are a Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-A-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 apiece, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 166 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Gazette together for one year for $2.20.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.50.

REYNOLDS' SHOW

The coming to Bedford of the state candidates of the Penrose machine seemed to be for the special purpose of giving the Big Boss a boost. They all spoke for him. Two special trains and four bands brought enough people to town to form a procession of less than sixty, excluding the members of the bands. The courthouse was filled with persons of all political complexions, many of them women and children, all of whom were more than a little surprised to hear all the "big guns" wasting ammunition in lauding John M. Reynolds. Strange that foreigners have to be brought to Bedford to tell the people who reside in the same town and county of the qualities of Mr. Reynolds; and yet not so strange after all, for during all his years here he has been for Reynolds and cared nothing for plain people—save when he could use them at election time.

The meeting ended the august Congressmen entertained the speakers, the correspondents and the chairman of the county committee and the chairman of the meeting at his home—what an unique distinction! His reason for inviting the speakers is obvious, the correspondents of the city papers he thought might say something kindly of him and mention his hospitality; the two chairmen had to be invited to keep up appearances; but where were his running mates? Where were Miller and Oster? That is easy; he is in the fight for Reynolds and Reynolds only except in so far as he can benefit the others to make use of them. Strange discrimination—but then he is a corporation lawyer! The inequality of men was made apparent; Reynolds and those who could, in his estimation, do him some good were at the festal board within the palace and Oster and Miller—some place else.

It was Reynolds' show, pure and simple, but it will not save the county for him.

BAILEY'S BOOM

An article from Bedford in the Johnstown Democrat, Mr. Bailey's paper, bearing date of October 14, begins, "The Bryan Democracy has formally organized in Bedford with Prof. D. C. Stunkard as chairman, Daniel S. Horn as secretary, Charles A. Wertz as treasurer and Dr. Statler of Pleasantville and Dr. A. Enfield of this place among the members of the executive committee, which is made up of a number of leading Democrats."

The article claims that arrangements are being made for meetings at Queen, Pleasantville, Hyndman and other points. This is an item worthy of little thought. One of those mentioned as officers of the organization emphatically denies that he authorized the use of his name. Two of the others have not been seen but it is known that two of the number, Daniel S. Horn and Dr. Enfield are for Bailey on the surface—the only possible reason for so acting being to further the interests of John M. Reynolds.

These, Horn and Enfield, are they to whom Bailey addressed letters which were printed in his paper when he addressed the Democrats of the county prior to the nomination, and the use of their names secured for him THREE VOTES in the whole county of Bedford. Are they samples of the prominent Democrats who are espousing the cause of Bailey to help Reynolds?

In the case of Mr. Daniel S. Horn, Esq., it is reasonable to suppose that he voted the Republican ticket in 1904, and the legality of his vote at that time is still in doubt. He had moved from one ward to another and the board refused to accept his vote. Later Rufus C. Haderman appeared before the board and plead his cause and his vote was accepted. Now Mr. Haderman was at that time chairman of the Republican county committee and certainly he would not have plead for one who intended to vote the Democratic ticket. This is our reason for stating that he was not then what he now claims to be—a Democratic Democrat.

Dr. Americus Enfield is known to the voters of this county. He has openly declared himself on at least one occasion on the stump, and at an election within the memory of men yet living he showed his ticket to a prominent Democrat, declaring he would vote it, and seemed proud of his bolt. It was a ballot for Reynolds. His exhibition before the recent Democratic county convention as well as similar exhibitions on other occasions are well known and need no comment. Dr. A. Enfield is to be pitied rather than censured.

If evidence of the fact that this is a Reynolds move—a move for Reynolds and in his interest—is needed beyond those outspoken—Enfield and Horn—it may be found in the rejoicing of the organs owned by Reynolds or edited by those who hold office and are subject to removal if they incur his displeasure.

AN OPTICAL DELUSION

It is not pleasant to say harsh things. With reference to a little occurrence at the Reynolds meeting last week we prefer to take the charitable view rather than accuse one of Reynolds' local editors with wilfully attempting to deceive his fellowman. A reporter on one of the city papers who had not seen the bands in parade asked one by his side, "How many were in the parade?" Mr. Reynolds' editor spoke up and said, "There were a thousand; easily a thousand." As a matter of fact there were four bands in the procession, the first being followed by less than 20 people, the second by about the same number, the third by 21 and the fourth by not a man, woman or child. Such was the parade as it approached the courthouse. To accuse a brother editor of deliberately trying to deceive the reporter, thus adding to Reynolds' glory by having an exaggerated report circulated, would be to speak too plainly. Let us hope that it was an optical delusion.

Dr. Enfield, in a recent letter to the Johnstown Democrat makes wonderful predictions for the Reynolds-Bailey combination and throws bouquets (?) at The Gazette. But the people know Dr. Enfield and his political record, and nothing more is necessary.

Enough Coal for 400 Years

The Royal Commission of experts on British coal supplies reports sufficient coal unmined to last about 400 years at the present rate of consumption, so that there is no need to worry about the fuel question. There is also no need to worry when the appetite is poor, the nerves unstrung, sleep restless and the bowels constipated. Just get a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters from your druggist and take a dose before meals and at bedtime and see how quickly your ailments will disappear. You'll wonder why you suffered so long when the medicine to cure you was always within your reach. It always cures poor appetite, belching, flatulency, insomnia, nervousness, constipation, dyspepsia, indigestion, female ills, biliousness, liver and kidney ills or malaria, fever and ague. MRS. JEFFERSON DAVIS

Widow of President of the Confederate States Dies in New York.

Mrs. Varina Davis, widow of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States of America, died at the Hotel Majestic, New York city, Tuesday evening, after an illness of several weeks, aged 80 years. Her only surviving child, Mrs. J. Addison Hayes of Colorado Springs, Col., was at her bedside.

Mrs. Davis was very devoted to her only surviving daughter and to her grandchildren, but she had never recovered from the loss of her daughter Winnie, who died at Narragansett Pier in 1898, and who was beloved throughout the southland as the daughter of the confederacy.

Mrs. Davis was Miss Varina Howell and was born at Natchez, Miss., in 1826. In 1845 she married Mr. Davis. In Mississippi and was a devoted wife and most loyal companion during the struggles of the Civil War. After Mr. Davis' release from imprisonment at Fort Monroe they went to England, returning afterward to live in Memphis, Tenn. Later they removed to Beauvoir station, on the Mississippi coast, where Mrs. Davis acted as her husband's amanuensis when he wrote his "Decline and Fall of the Confederate Government." Since her husband's death in 1889 Mrs. Davis has written numerous criticisms and articles for newspapers and magazines.

A CAPITOL ALPHABET

A is for architect, with his grand air, He specifies space at three hundred per chair.

B is for Perry, who discovers what's hid; Our treasurer bold, who has lifted the lid.

C is for capitol, commission and cash; Carte blanche chandeliers and furnishings rash.

D is for doors, where heroes, alas! Have established their likenesses enduring in brass.

E is for Emery, who's never afraid; He will bury the gang if we give him our aid.

F stands for fight, the feathers will fly; The machine says it's nothing, but in secret they cry.

G is for Governor, a capital jurist; As a judge of the capitol, one of the poorest.

H is for Huston, who planned the great pile; He made all the contracts; we pay by the mile.

J also for Joseph, to the job he fell heir, O! Send him to Egypt to pull legs of a Pharaoh.

M is for money, nine millions and more; 'Twas a mere idle balance in the treasury's door.

P for pound foolish and fat public purse; Political pull for the people's a curse.

R is reformer, with figures that bristle; He's provoking, and says, "It's too much for our whistle."

S is for Stone, who felt very proud When he said, "Tis all built for the money allowed."

T is for trimmings, like a telephone booth; Three thousand and more is a trifle, forsooth.

W is wainscot, and gold-painted wood; When we gaze at the bill, it's a little too good.

X is a quantity exactly unknown; Next time we shall vote let our surplus alone.

Z is for zenith, where stars sometimes fall; Architect, Governor, Auditor, all.—Lancaster Intelligencer.

LETTER TO P. DONAHOE & CO.

Bedford, Pa.

Dear Sirs: A pound of good meat and no bone is worth more than a half-pound of meat and a half-pound of bone; but there are, as you say, a great many people who won't pay more than a certain price by the pound. Give 'em bone; that's right; give 'em plenty of bone!

There are people who won't pay more than $1.50 a gallon for paint; give 'em bone!

There's no better school than experience; cost is high; but the lesson is never forgotten.

Let a man paint two houses alike, same size; one Devoe, the other that $1.50 paint. He buys 10 gallons of each, and pays $3 a day for labor—$3 a day is $3 a gallon, easier reckoning.

He has to buy two gallons more of the $1.50 paint; and has two gallons left of Devoe; 12 gallons $1.50, $18; 8 gallons $1.75, $14; $4 more for "cheap" paint.

He pays $3 a gallon for painting; 8 gallons $24; 12 gallons $36; $12 more for painting "cheap" paint.

He'll buy the less-gallons paint after that. If people are slow to learn, it's because they keep on buying bone-meat. Give 'em plenty of bone. Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOE & CO.
P. S. Metzger Hardware and House Furnishing Co. sells our paint.

FAULTY DIGESTION

Quickly Shatters the Nervous System and Should be Given Attention at Once.

The most common cause of weak and shattered nerves is faulty digestion. For that reason Mi-o-na stomach tablets are of the greatest good to any nervous sufferer. They strengthen the digestive system so that it will assimilate all the elements of nerve force from the daily food, and the nerves will be strengthened, sleeplessness will be overcome and weakness will vanish.

If you have specks before the eyes, sick and nervous headaches or back-aches, in fact, if there are any symptoms of indigestion or nervousness, begin the use of Mi-o-na at once, and you will soon notice improvement in health.

You run no risk in buying Mi-o-na, for F. W. Jordan gives an absolute guarantee with every 50-cent box, that the money will be refunded unless Mi-o-na does all that is claimed for it.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE CANDIDATES

Pictures of Stuart and Emery Free to Their Followers.

Two handsome portraits, genuine photographs, such as sell at art stores at $2 each, the subjects being Edwin S. Stuart and Lewis Emery, Jr., candidates for the Governorship of Pennsylvania, will be issued as art supplements to the Sunday North American for October 21 and October 28.

The Stuart picture will be issued on October 21 and that of Mr. Emery on the following Sunday.

The editor of this paper has received advance copies of the two portraits, and pronounces them works of art of the highest class. Nothing so good has ever been issued as a special supplement.

As the editions of the Sunday North American for these two dates will be limited and the demand unusually large, it will be necessary to order the paper in advance to insure delivery.

SALE REGISTER

All persons having sale bills printed at this office get a free notice in the sale register. This is worth several times the price of the bills.

W. B. Sousser, assignee of estate of Henry B. and Mary Jane Penney, will offer at public sale on the Henry B. Penney farm, in Bedford township, at 9 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, October 23, the following personal property: One clover huller, mowing machine, hay rake, cradles, plows, cultivators, buggy, wagons, one brown mare, one-third interest in 16 acres corn, cutting-box, potatoes, buckwheat and many other articles.

At the same time and place Mary J. Penney will offer for sale, cows, young cattle, wheat, hay, harrow, hay shavings, corn coverer, forks, hoes, &c.

At Imbertown on Thursday, November 8, at 1 p. m., Samuel Hammond will offer for sale his farm, containing 100 acres, new barn 30x60 feet, good frame house, 1,000 apple-trees planted three years ago; 16 acres fine meadow land close to Imbertown; horses, cattle, sleigh, wagons, buggy, drill, mower, reaper, and other farm implements; 9-horse power gasoline engine and chop mill in good condition.

Alison Burdick will offer at public sale at his residence in Mann's Choice on Saturday, October 20, at one o'clock p. m., six bedsteads, mattresses, springs, extension tables, refrigerator, carpets and matting, stands, churn, sausage grinder and stuffer, dishes and many other articles.

H. Grant Diehl, administrator of Edward H. Wetstone, will offer at public sale on the premises, two miles west of Bedford, on Thursday, November 1, the mansion farm, containing about 130 acres, about 120 acres cleared and fenced and the balance in timber, having thereon erected a two-story frame dwelling, new bank barn and out buildings.

Albert Smith will offer for sale at his place of residence in Cumberland Valley on Thursday, November 1, at one o'clock, his entire flock of 75 head of sheep, all ewes. Farmers needing sheep will do well to attend this sale.

George Ellenberger will offer at public sale on the premises in Napier township, one mile from Helixville, on Saturday, November 17, at one o'clock p. m., 211 acres adjoining lands of Henry Ellenberger, John Crissman, Benjamin Egolf and others, having thereon a large frame barn, 40x80 feet, a two-story log house and out buildings; also an 11-acre lot adjoining the above, on which is a frame house, good stable and summer house.

Lutheran Church Services

CURE CATARRH NOW

Do Not Wait Until Winter or Disease Will Become Chronic.

Many people in Bedford are troubled with the symptoms of offensive catarrh which usually appear at this season of the year.

Before the disease becomes chronic use Hyomei and get complete relief from catarrhal troubles. If you do not treat the disease promptly it may become chronic and almost incurable. Use Hyomei now and cleanse your system of catarrhal troubles, and you will be free from catarrh and far less susceptible to coughs and colds during the winter.

There is no stomach dosing with Hyomei, just breathe it.

F. W. Jordan gives a guarantee with every package of Hyomei. Complete outfit costs but $1, extra bottle if needed 50 cents.

THE REFUGEES

"I do not know who these men are, and I do not know whether they are taking us. I fancy that they are taking us to some place where they can shut us up until this business blows over."

"Well, they'll need to be smart about it."

"Why?"

"Else maybe they won't find us when they want us."

"What do you mean?"

For answer the American, with a twist and a wriggle, drew his two hands apart and held them in front of his comrade's face.

"Bless you, it's the first thing they teach the paupers in an Indian wigwam! Put your hands out." With a few dexterous twists he loosened De Catinat's bonds until he also was able to slip his hands free. "Now for your feet, if you'll put them up. They'll find that we are easier to catch than to hold."

But at that moment the carriage began to slow down, and the clank of the hoofs of the riders in front of them died suddenly away. Peeping through the windows, the prisoners saw a huge, dark building stretching in front of them, so high and so broad that the night shrouded it in upon every side. A great archway hung above them, and the lamps shone on the rude wooden gate studded with ponderous clamps and nails. In the upper part of the door was a small square iron grating, and through this they could catch a glimpse of the gleam of a lantern and of a bearded face which looked out at them. De Vivonne, standing in his stirrups, craned his head up toward the grating, so that the two men most interested could hear little of the conversation which followed. They saw only that the horseman held a gold ring up in the air and that the face above, which had begun by shaking and frowning, was now nodding and smiling. An instant later the head disappeared, the door swung open upon screaming hinges, and the carriage drove on into the courtyard beyond, leaving the escort, with the exception of De Vivonne, outside. As the horses pulled up, a knot of rough fellows clustered round, and the two prisoners were dragged roughly out. In the light of the torches which flared around them they could see that they were hemmed in by high turreted walls upon every side. A bulky man with a bearded face, the same whom they had seen at the grating, was standing in the center of the group of armed men issuing his orders.

"To the upper dungeon, Simon!" he cried. "And see that they have two bundles of straw and a loaf of bread until we learn our master's will."

"I know not who your master may be," said De Catinat, "but I would ask you by what warrant he dares to stop two messengers of the king while traveling in his service?"

"By St. Denis, if my master play the king a trick, it will be by tie and tie," the stout man answered, with a grin. "But no more talk! Away with them, Simon, and you answer to me for their safe keeping."

It was in vain that De Catinat raved and threatened, invoking the most terrible menaces upon all who were concerned in detaining him. Two stout knaves thrusting him from behind and one dragging in front forced him through a narrow gate and along a stone flagged passage. They made their way down three successive corridors and through three doors, each of which was locked and barred behind them. Then they ascended a winding stone stair, and finally they were thrust into a small square dungeon, and two trusses of straw were thrown in after them. An instant later a heavy key turned in the lock, and they were left to their own meditations.

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet under ground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he assumes them to be such, prescribing his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are added. The suffering patient gets no better, by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequalled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nerve "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

Very grim and dark those meditations were in the case of De Catinat. A stroke of good luck had made him at court, and now this other ill fortune had destroyed him. There were his people in Paris, too—his sweet Adele, his old uncle, who had been as good as a father to him. What protector would they have in their troubles now that he had lost the power that might have shielded them? But his energetic comrade had yielded to no feeling of despondency. The instant that the clang of the prison door had assured him that he was safe from interruption he had felt all round the walls and flooring to see what manner of place this might be. His search had ended in the discovery of a small fireplace at one corner and of two great clumsy billets of wood, which seemed to have been left there to serve as pillows for the prisoners. Having satisfied himself that the chimney was so small that it was utterly impossible to pass even his head up it, he drew the two blocks of wood over to the window and was able by placing one above the other and standing on tiptoe on the highest to reach the bars which guarded it. Drawing himself up and fixing one toe in an inequality of the wall, he managed to look out on to the courtyard which they had just quitted. The carriage and De Vivonne were passing out through the gate as he looked, and he heard a moment later the slam of the heavy door and the clatter of hoofs from the troop of horsemen outside. The sentinels and his retainers had disappeared; the torches, too, were gone, and save for the measured tread of a pair of sentinels in the yard twenty feet beneath him, all was silent throughout the great castle.

The window was large enough to pass his body through if it were not for those bars. He shook them and hung his weight upon them, but they were as thick as his thumb and firmly welded; then, getting some strong hold for his other foot, he supported himself by one hand, while he picked with his knife at the setting of the iron. It was cement, as smooth as glass and as hard as marble. His knife turned when he tried to loosen it. But there was still the stone. It was sandstone, not so very hard. If he could cut grooves in it he might be able to draw out bars, cement and all. He sprang down to the floor again and was thinking how he should best set to work when a groan drew his attention to his companion.

"Something on your mind?" said Amos Green, sitting down upon his billets of wood. "What was it, then?" The guardsman here made a movement of impatience. "What was it? How can you ask me when you know as well as I do the wretched failure of my mission? It was the king's wish that the archbishop should marry them. The archbishop should have been at the palace by now. Ah, I can see the king's cabinet. I can see him waiting. I can see madame waiting. I can hear them speak of the unhappy De Catinat!"

"I see all that," said the American stolidly, "and I see something more."

"What then?"

"I see the archbishop trying them up together."

"He could not be at the palace."

"On the contrary, he reached the palace about half an hour ago."

De Catinat sprang to his feet. At the palace? he screamed. "Then who gave him the message?"

"I did," said Amos Green.

If the American had expected to surprise or delight his companion by this curt announcement he was woefully disappointed, for De Catinat approached him with a face which was full of sympathy and trouble.

When a horse is so overworked it lies down and in other ways declares its inability to go further, you would consider it criminal to use force. Many a man of humane impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. Overdriven, overworked, when what it needs is something that will digest the food eaten and help the stomach to recuperate. Something like Kodol For Dyspepsia that is sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

"My dear friend," said he, "I have been selfish and thoughtless. That fall from your horse has shaken you more than you think. Lie down upon this straw and see if a little sleep may not"—

"I tell you that the bishop is there!" cried Amos Green.

"He is, he is," said De Catinat soothingly. "He is most certainly there. I trust that you have no pain?"

The American raved in the air with his knotted fists. "You think that I'm crazed," he cried, "and, by the eternal, you are enough to make me so! When I say that I sent the bishop I mean that I saw to the job. You remember when I stepped back to your friend the major?"

It was the soldier's turn to grow excited now. "Well?" he cried, gripping the other's arm.

"Well, when we send a scout into the woods, if the matter is worth it, we send a second one at another hour, and so one or other comes back with his hair on. That's the Iroquois fashion, and a good fashion too."

"My God, I believe that you have saved me!"

"I went back to the major then, and I asked him when he was in Paris to pass by the archbishop's door. I showed him this lump of chalk. If we've been there," said I, 'you'll see a great cross on the left side of the doopost. If there's no cross, then pull the latch and ask the bishop if he'll come up to the palace as quick as his horses can bring him.' The major started an hour after us. He would be in Paris by half past 10; the bishop would be in his carriage by 11, and he would reach Versailles half an hour ago—that is to say, about half past 12. By the Lord, I think I've driven him off his head!"

De Catinat spun round the cell now, waving his arms and his legs, with his shadow capering up the wall behind him, all distorted in the moonlight.

"Oh, if I could but do something for you!" he exclaimed.

"You can, then. Lie down on that straw and go to sleep."

By persuasions and a little pushing he got his debilitated companion on to his couch again and heaped the straw over him to serve as a blanket.

So weary was the young guardsman that it was long past noon and the sun was shining out of a cloudless blue sky before he awoke. For a moment, enveloped as he was in straw, and with the rude arch of the dungeon meeting in four rough hewn gables above his head, he stared about him in bewilderment. Then in an instant the doings of the day before, his mission, the ambushade, his imprisonment, all flashed back to him, and he sprang to his feet. His comrade, who had been dozing in the corner, jumped up also at the first movement, with his hand on his knife and a sinister glance directed toward the door.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" said he. "I thought it was the man. They brought those two loaves and a jug of water just about dawn, when I was settling down for a rest."

"And did he say anything?"

"No; it was the little black one."

"Simon, they called him."

"The same. He laid the things down and was gone. I thought that maybe if he came again we might get him to stop. Maybe if we got these stirrup leathers round his ankles he would tell us where we are and what is to be done with us."

"Pshaw! What does it matter since our mission is done?"

"It may not matter to you—there's no accounting for tastes—but it matters a good deal to me. I'm not used to sitting in a hole, like a bear in a trap, waiting for what other folks choose to do with me."

"There's no help but patience, my friend."

"These are my night's work. The bar is the top one of the grate. I had a job to loosen it, but there it is. The pegs I whittled out of that log. You see, peg number one goes in here, where I have picked a hole between the stones. Then I've made this other log into a mallet, and with two cracks there it is firm fixed so that you can put your weight on it. Now these two go in the same way into the holes above here. So! Now, you see, you can stand up there and look out of that window without asking too much of your toe joint. Try it."

De Catinat sprang up and looked eagerly out between the bars.

"I do not know the place," said he, shaking his head. "It may be any one of thirty castles which lie upon the south side of Paris and within six or seven leagues of it."

He was dropping back to the floor and put his weight upon the bar. To his amazement it came away in his hand.

"Look, Amos, look!" he cried.

"Ah, you've found it out! Well, I did that during the night. I could make no way with my knife, but when I got the bar out of the grate I managed faster. I'll put this one back now, or some of those folk down below may notice that we have got it loose."

"Are they all loose?"

"Only the one at present, but we'll get the other two out during the night. You can take that bar out and work with it while I use my own picker at the other. You see, the stone is soft, and by grinding it you soon make a groove along which you can slip the bar. It will be mighty queer if we can't clear a road for ourselves before morning."

"Well, but even if we could get out into the courtyard where could we turn to then?"

"One thing at a time, friend. Anyway, there is more air in the yard than in here, and when the window is clear we shall soon plan out the rest."

The two comrades did not dare to do any work during the day for fear

He sprang down at him in an instant with his bar.

they should be surprised by the jailer or observed from without. The instant that night fell they were both up on the pegs, grinding away at the hard stone and tugging at the bars. It was a rainy night, and there was a sharp thunderstorm, but they could see very well, while the shadow of the arched window prevented their being seen. Before midnight they had loosened one bar, and the other was just beginning to give when some slight noise made them turn their heads, and there was their jailer standing, open mouthed, in the middle of the cell, staring up at them.

It was De Catinat who observed him first, and he sprang down at him in an instant with his bar, but at his movement the man rushed for the door and drew it after him just as the American's tool whizzed past his ear and down the passage.

"It is scarce worth while to go on," said De Catinat.

"We may as well be doing that as anything else. If my picker had been an inch lower I'd have had him. Well, maybe he'll get a stroke or break his neck down those stairs. I've nothing to work with now, but a few rubs with your bar will finish the job. Ah, dear, you are right, and we are fairly tired!"

A great bell had begun to ring in the chateau, and there was a loud buzz of voices and a clatter of feet upon the stones. Hoarse orders were shouted, and there was the sound of turning keys. Five minutes passed, however, and yet another five minutes, without any one appearing.

"Well, I'll have that bar out, after all," said the American at last, rising and stepping over to the window. "Anyhow we'll see what all this caterwauling is about." He climbed up on his pegs as he spoke and peeped out. "Come up!" he cried excitedly to his comrade. "They've got some other game going on here, and they are all a deal too busy to bother their heads about us."

De Catinat clambered up beside him, and the two stood staring down into the courtyard. A brazier had been lit at each corner, and the place was thronged with men, many of whom carried torches. The main gate was open, and a carriage, which had apparently just driven in, was standing at a small door immediately in front of their window. A man wearing a plumed hat and enveloped in a riding coat stepped from the carriage and then, turning round, drew out a second person out after him. There was a scuffle, a cry, a push, and the two figures vanished through the door. As it closed the carriage drove away, the torches and braziers were extinguished, the main gate was closed once more, and all was as quiet as before this sudden interruption.

"Well!" gasped De Catinat. "Is this another king's messenger they've got?"

"There will be lodgings for two more here in a short time," said Amos Green. "Give me your bar again. This thing is giving. I won't take us long to have it out." He set to work furiously, trying to deepen the groove in the stone, through which he hoped to drag the staple. Suddenly he ceased and strained his ears.

"By thunder!" said he. "There's some one working on the other side!"

They both stood listening. There were the thud of hammers, the rasping of a saw and the clatter of wood from the other side of the wall.

"What can they be doing? Can you see them?"

"They are too near the wall."

"I think I can manage," said De Catinat. "I am slighter than you."

He pushed his head and neck and half of one shoulder through the gap between the bars, and there he remained until his friend thought that perhaps he had stuck and pulled his legs to extricate him. He writhed back, however, without any difficulty.

"They are building something," he whispered.

"Building?"

"Yes. There are four of them, with a lantern."

"What can they be building, then?"

"It's a shed, I think. I can see four sockets in the ground, and they are fixing four uprights into them."

"Well, we can't get away as long as there are four men just under our window."

"Impossible!"

"But we may as well finish our work for all that."

The gentle scrapings of his iron were drowned amid the noise which swelled ever louder from without. The bar loosened at the end, and he drew it in.

The steady hammering and sawing went forward. It was early morning, and the first cold light was beginning to steal over the courtyard before the work was at last finished and the workmen had left. Then at last the prisoners dared to climb up and to see what it was which had been constructed during the night. It gave them a catch of the breath as they looked at it. It was a scaffold. It was buttressed up against their wall, and in the center stood a headsman's block.

"I think it is time that we left," said Amos Green. "The window is clear. Let us make a rush for it!"

"It is useless. I can see a line of armed men along the farther side of the yard. And here come more. See, at the center gate!"

As he spoke the door which faced them opened, and a singular procession filed out. First came two dozen footmen, walking in pairs, all carrying halberds and clad in the same maroon colored liveries. After them a huge bearded man, with his tunic off and the sleeves of his coarse shirt rolled up over his elbows, strode along with a great ax over his left shoulder. Behind him, a priest with an open missal pattered forth prayers, and in his shadow was a woman, clad in black, her neck bared, and a black shawl cast over her head and drooping in front of her bowed face. Within grip of her walked a tall, thin, fierce faced man, with harsh red features and a great jutting nose. He wore a flat velvet cap with a single eagle feather fastened into it by a diamond clasp, which gleamed in the morning light.

But bright as was his gown his dark eyes were brighter still and sparkled from under his bushy brows with a mad brilliancy which bore with it something of menace and of terror.

The woman had faltered at the foot of the scaffold, but the man thrust her on, and two of the followers caught her by either wrist and dragged her forward.

"Oh, Maurice! Maurice!" she screamed. "I am not fit to die! Oh, forgive me, Maurice, as you hope for forgiveness yourself! Maurice! Maurice!" She strove to get toward him, to clutch at his wrist, at his sleeve, but he stood with his hand on his sword, gazing at her with a face which was all wreathed and contorted with merriment. She turned away and threw back the mantle which had shrouded her features.

"Ah, sire!" she cried. "Sire! If you could see me now!"

And at the cry and at the sight of that fair pale face De Catinat, looking down from the window, was stricken as though by a dagger, for there, standing beside the headsman's block, was she who had been the most powerful, as well as the wildest and the fairest, of the women of France—none other than Francoise de Montespan, so lately the favorite of the king.

BLANKENBURG'S ARTICLE

Forty Years in the Wilderness or Masters and Rulers of

"THE FREEMEN"

The Excellent Work of D. Clarence Gibbons as Secretary of the Law and Order Society.

Events have been following each other for the last few weeks with lightning-like rapidity and have brought in their wake such a transformation in public affairs that a rearrangement of the last two of this series of articles has become necessary.

The August number was originally intended to give a brief account of additional phases of corruption and maladministration that have lain like a leaden hand upon our community, and to speak more fully of the one agency that has, during the depressing years of vice and crime, stood like an adamant wall—a strong and persistent factor for the redemption of the city: "The Law and Order Society of Philadelphia." We have to hurry over the field, as the distance this chapter must traverse allows only a few lingering moments at some of the more important stations.

The Organization has for years, in its rapacious ramifications, stopped at nothing to carry ill-gotten shekels to the coffers of its adherents; it even attacked and tried to enslave in its predatory excursions the public schools and the teachers of our children. Not only in Philadelphia, but in other Pennsylvania cities, have the disciples of the school of graft, under the Quay-Pearse-Durham-McNichol professorship, attacked the citadel of education and levelled blackmail upon the teachers, men and women, by extorting money from them to secure protection. A few cases of this insidious system of extortion happened to become public and reached trial in a court of justice; the defendants were found guilty and served time in prison cells. As they have expiated their crime and were victims rather than representatives of "the system" and for the sake of their families their names are left unmentioned.

It has been stated, but hitherto doubted by many, that for the past six years for every dollar honestly expended by the municipality a dollar has been stolen or wasted. Investigation now being made tends to confirm this estimate and will show the truth to the people of Philadelphia who, so long plundered, so long resigned to what they considered the inevitable, have at last been aroused to a feeling of resentment that bodes the discomfited public plunderers no good.

We deem it best for the cause of justice not to anticipate the results of investigations now being conducted. One example of the magnitude of graft in public contracts will serve as an interesting specimen: A few years ago the contract for collecting garbage in the fifth district was awarded for $88,500. The contractor sublet this work for $37,500, at which price the sub-contractor made, as he said, good money which gave him a fine balance in bank! This steal shows that for every dollar actually paid for doing the work, nearly one dollar and forty cents was filched from the city treasury. Tweed would turn in his grave if he realized that he was quite a moderate grafter. The culmination of Organization effort and thievery is the proposed Northeast Boulevard, which, at an ultimate expenditure of ten to fifteen million dollars, is to open in curves as crooked as its projectors a three-hundred-foot avenue through farm lands bought at a low price by the plotters. Boulevards are generally supposed to run in a straight line, but this scheme of the grafters is planned to run for ten miles at all kinds of angles in the direction of and past the lands acquired by the Gang, increasing the value of their holdings immensely. The craftiness and subtlety of this steal is best exposed by the statement that the thirty-fifth ward, the main beneficiary of the proposed boulevard (it has been called "huddle-vard"), contains almost twenty-five per cent. of the area of Philadelphia (21,287 acres) with only 8,614 inhabitants (Census of 1900), and of these less than one in five who live or own property close to the steal would be really benefited! Such conspiracy to enrich a few looters at the expense of the whole community seeks its parallel. Fortunately, Mayor Weaver has the power to stop this "extravaganza" and the first step in that direction has already been taken.

Policy-playing had, during the Ashbridge administration, taken such a hold upon certain classes of people, under the very eyes of the police, tolerated and connived at by them, that it threatened the very life of the city. Exposures made in a series of startling articles by the North American attracted the attention of President Judge Finletter, of Court No. 3, and prompted him to sit as a committing magistrate to investigate this crying evil. The evidence produced was of a sickening character; children of tender ages (from six to twelve) testified how they were sent to policy-shops to buy slips, and how, when unable to find the place, even police officers would direct them where to go. The judge, in announcing the result of this investigation, said: "The evidence shows conclusively that our public school system in this city is in danger of being corrupted at its fountain; that children six or seven years of age are familiar with the crime of policy-playing, that in one of the schools over 150 of the scholars were buyers of policy."

These saddening facts can be directly traced to an organization that had to protect crime because it was criminal itself, that tolerated the execrable Ashbridge administration because it was less its master than its servant. That administration committed outrages and permitted abuses which almost shocked the hardened leaders of the Gang itself.

The Law and Order Society, our safeguard during these dark days, will be twenty-four years old on September 22nd, next, having been organized in 1881. Its original purpose was to bring about a better enforcement of the Sunday laws, especially those relating to the sale of liquor on the Sabbath. Since that time, and particularly in the last six years, it has been forced to perform nearly every branch of voluntary police work, owing to the offensive and depraved political conditions that existed in the city.

At the time the society was organized, the liquor license fee was only $50. Licenses were issued to anyone who had the price, with utter disregard for fitness or character. It did not matter either whether or not the licensed place was next to a church, a school or a factory. Remonstrances were usually in vain.

Immediately after it was established the society began to secure evidence that the local laws were violated, and in a short time hundreds of persons had their licenses revoked and many saloon-keepers were fined by the court. In 1887, the last year of the old license-law, there were 5,773 retail saloons in the city, and the records of the wholesale places were so badly kept that there was no way of ascertaining the exact number. Often a record of a wholesale license would be found sandwiched in between the record of a dog-license and the license given an itinerant peddler. At least ninety-five per cent. of the licensed places kept open on Sunday; a large number were also dives and brothels of the lowest order, run under the guise of concert-halls. Dissolute men and women frequented them and low variety-shows were given to attract the unwary. A child of six could buy beer or whiskey as easily as man of fifty.

In 1887 the Law and Order Society was instrumental in bringing about the passage, by the State Legislature, of the act known as the Brooks High-License Law. It went into effect June 1, 1888, and raised the fee from $50 to $500. In 1895 the fee was increased to $1,100 in Philadelphia. The new law changed the power to grant licenses from clerks and the city treasurer's office to the Court of Quarter Sessions, and gave the court power to refuse or revoke a license because it was not needed in the locality applied for, because of the moral unfitness of the applicant, or because he had violated the law. The result was that at the first session of the license court in 1888, upon evidence furnished by the society and to satisfy public sentiment, the number of licenses was reduced from 5,773 to 1,194. Work then began in earnest, for speak-easies began to grow up over night and flourished under police protection. A large number of saloon-keepers who were refused licenses started in the locality applied for, and in a short time several hundred of the owners were arrested on evidence furnished by the society, nearly all of them being fined or sent to jail. For the next four or five years that was about all the work it was able to do. The courts were careful and acted with the utmost fairness in granting licenses and finally the sale of liquor in saloons on Sunday was stopped entirely. The conduct of the liquor business grew better under the Brooks law; concert-halls and dives disappeared, and in the past year there has not been a single complaint of Sunday selling against a licensed dealer.

It is true that at the present time the city is cursed with a large number of speak-easies and so-called political clubs, but these places, which number about 1,000, can in no sense be attributed to any defect in the Brooks law. The chief reason for their existence in defiance of law is found in the fact that the city has until now been absolutely dominated by the most corrupt gang of political proboscises who were ever allowed outside the walls of a penitentiary. The Organization owned the police department, the members of which, to keep their jobs, had, though reluctantly, to do as they were told. If the police officials had been honest and respected the law, the speak-easies and fake clubs would have gone out of existence in short order. Since 1887 the population has increased about 500,000, and the number of licenses from 1,194 to 1,892; there are now few complaints heard against licensed liquor dealers as they are anxious to conduct a legitimate business.

The work of the Law and Order Society has grown to its present enormous proportions within the last six years. D. Clarence Gibbons, a man whom even the crooks and thugs respect because, as they say, he "is on the level," and who never makes a move until he is sure of his ground, was elected secretary of the society in 1890 and has had full charge of the work ever since. He is to many one of the strongest individual figures in Philadelphia today—and rightfully so. In the last six years he has caused the arrest of more than 2,000 keepers of speak-easies and disorderly-house and gambling-house keepers and inmates. The records of the Court of Quarter Sessions show that more than ninety-seven per cent. of the Law and Order Society cases have either resulted in pleas of guilty or in convictions after trial. Mr. Gibbons has been called to many parts of the state for counsel and assistance and has rendered efficient service away from home. Other states have called on him, and at one time he investigated Camden, N. J., and arrested 210 persons on charges of selling liquor without a license or for conducting gambling-rooms. Of those arrested, 209 pleaded guilty, while the 210th man was let off on recommendation of the prosecutor of the pleas, as he was an old man and had relinquished the business. Gambling paraphernalia worth $10,000 was confiscated and the county enriched by fines and costs amounting to $21,000.

The greatest record made by the Law and Order Society was within the last nine months. During this time it disrupted the Organization and police-protected white-slave syndicate, which was composed of the scum of the world, moral lepers who should not be tolerated in any town on earth. Though strongly entrenched the syndicate was broken up, its members arrested or made fugitives, and scores of young girls released from a life of bondage and shame. In nine months the society, under the direction of Secretary Gibbons, arrested 177 keepers of white-slave dens, dive-keepers and other officially-protected criminals. Of this number 173 pleaded guilty or were convicted, three died and one was acquitted. In the same period the police forced by public sentiment to make some showing, made 380 arrests. Of this number 274 were acquitted upon the friendly testimony of the very police who had arrested them. A few, who were politically "wrong," were convicted, while a number have not yet been tried.

The Law and Order Society has been doing its work with nine men, while the police department numbers about 2,600 men and costs the city about $3,000,000. The society has never had more than $14,500 for an entire year's work, and all it has done so far has been in the face of public obstruction.

A Bad Complexion comes from bad blood. Pimples on the face, Acne, Liver Spots, Sallow Skin, dark rings about the eyes, sick-headache, pale, worn-out look, dizziness will all disappear if you take a Treatment of Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets, for sale at J. Reed Irvine & Co.'s drug store, and put your blood in good condition. This Treatment does not force things from the liver, it cleanses it, it makes the liver healthy, it follows the action of the Pellets, following the bowels and digestive organs. Beware of violent purgatives. Ask for Ramon's—it is the only combined treatment put up in this way on the market. Entire Treatment 25c.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY

Ed. D. Heckerman Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Bedford people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. As a matter of fact," continued the druggist, "not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved, and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach. Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Mr. Heckerman and he will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

Catarrhal Deafness or Chronic Catarrhal Headaches will be instantly relieved by the use of NOSENA, a soothing Catarrhal Balm. Relief guaranteed, or money refunded. NOSENA contains no cocaine or harmful drug. Will immediately relieve the worst running cold, Rose Cold, Nasal Catarrh, Hay Fever, Throat Troubles, Hoarseness, etc., by tenderly soothing the inflamed, diseased membranes. The well known catarrhal ache can be instantly relieved by the use of this remedy. Mrs. Fannie Mathis, Payne, Pa., says: "I have been trying your NOSENA for Catarrh and have been entirely cured. Send me the price for a dozen tubes, as I want it for some of my neighbors." Large tubes 50 cents, at all druggists, or sample tube on receipt of ten cents in stamps by mail. BROWN MFG. Women's and Children's Coats and Furs

To be sure we claimed that last year's line was the "Best Ever," the "Greatest line we ever sold" and all that sort of thing—and we meant it too—but this year we've done even better. You know there's always room for improvement; then, again, there's a charm of novelty about a new line of coats, that's very alluring, and when you have put your whole heart and soul in getting it into shape and find that it comes up to the mark, in fact laps over a little, you are bound to get enthusiastic over it. That's the way with this Line.

We feel through and through that it is better than what has gone before. Another thing it shows what a lot of energy and vim there is in this house.

You'll readily admit the importance of this showing when you see it, and it might be well to be prepared to give us even a larger share of your business than you did last year—the goodness of the Line will justify it—in fact almost demand it. See if it doesn't!

Window Draperies, Curtains, Portieres, Couch and Table Covers

A discriminating woman recently said, "The curtains and portieres are of more importance than the rugs or carpets used in a room, because the former stand up clearly before you—impress themselves upon you—whereas the floor-coverings do not."

And she was right. Just take a look around yourself and see if your hangings do not make or mar the atmosphere of good taste and refinement in any room.

How imperative then is careful judgment in choosing. Our tapestries are a guarantee of correct design and artistic effect.

Just make it a point to see our tapestries the very next time you go shopping—curtains, table and couch covers. Their artistic beauty and wearing qualities are out of all proportion to their modest prices.
